

RADARSAT-2 soars like a bird with its wings extended, gliding 800 kilometres high above the Earth. The satellite is moving so fast – almost 28,000 kilometres an hour – that it travels around the Earth every 100 minutes, or 14 times a day.