

The way that RADARSAT-2 is able to see at all times and in any condition is by using something called Radar. The satellite sends a signal – called a radio wave – down to the Earth from space. The Earth then sends a signal back to the satellite, which will look different to the satellite depending on what the landscape is. This is how Radar works.

